Walk about 200 meters from the Matsuo bus stop and get on the path that runs along the Takimoto River, which travels left from the path headed towards the Tsuru Tsuru Onsen Hot Springs. The mountain trail divides into two trails just past the house with a warehouse: a new trail that follows the river and an old trail that follows a ridge. This time, take the old trail which has spectacular views. Go past the Agokake rock where it is said that Yamato Takeruno Mikoto (a Japanese God) set his chin so he could look over the Kanto Plains. You are near the summit after passing the Kuromo rock where the views towards Mt. Asoyama and the center of the city are magnificent. From the summit you can have an unhindered view of city center as well as the Kanto Plains. (To the south are the Tanzawa Mountains. Mt. Mitakesan is visible behind them.) For the descent, you may take the old trail from which you came, or you may go down on the new trail, which has the monument of the source of the Hiraigawa River. Go along the ravine where the sequential waterfalls of the Shiraiwa-no-Taki waterfall are glamorous.

When you climb over the Amagoi-bashi Bridge, you will see various continuing waterfalls. This chain of sequential waterfalls is collectively referred to as the Shiraiwa-no-Taki Waterfall. The mountain trail intersects the woodland path once. Cross the woodland path and go further up the mountain path along on the swamp. After a short while the mountain trail will run into the Mt. Asoyama woodland path. Follow the signpost without leaving the woodland path, and if you go up the woods on the left side, you will come out on a mountain ridge. You can see the mountain range of Mt.
